to pieces off Frying Pan shoals near the Carolina coast. Twenty-two members of its crew of twenty-seven either were drowned or died of exposure in open boats. The five known survivors are aboard a vessel bound for Galveston and could not be transferred to other rescue boats on account of high waves.*The schooner C. A. Smith crashed into a whaler in Cook bay, on the Oregon shore, and was being dashed to pieces late Sunday night. One life-boat containing eight or ten members of the crew was seen to overturn as it made vain effort to reach the shore.*Seven members of the crew were saved by a breeches buoy which broke before all of the crew could be saved. As darkness fell the wreck the figures of antic men could be dimly seen on the deck of the doomed vessel.*The mate of a rescue tug was swept missing members of the crew of the Norwegian steamer Runa, lost early yesterday morning off Frying Pan shoals on the North Carolina coast, was abandoned by coast guard officials here today upon receipt of a message from the cutter Modoc that a second of two lifeboats launched from the Runa had been found with its occupants dead.*The first lifeboat, picked up by an American tanker, W. W. Mills yesterday morning in the vicinity of Frying Pan buoys, contained four survivors. Later the tanker picked up another survivor clinging to a swelling door, and the five are now thought to be the only ones saved.*The second lifeboat, reported by the Modoc today, is thought to have contained six bodies, although the cutter did not state how many had been recovered. Early messages yesterday said the boat was adrift in the storms with six men aboard. This boat was the one found. While officials have not been advised definitely, they are of the opinion that the crew of the Runa numbered twenty-seven men, twenty-two of whom met death.*Search Continues.*The Modoc, which was rushed to the scene upon advice that the ship had gone down in the gale, was still in the vicinity and searching for bodies

Washington, December 16.—Severely Mellon has reduced to definite form his tax reduction proposals and forwarded a complete redraft of the revenue act to the house ways and means committee for use in consideration of tax revision legislation to be begun Tuesday.*The treasury secretary, in a letter accompanying the redrafted measure made public today at the treasury, noted that the reduction program
"appears to have met with a most favorable public reception," and advised acting Chairman Green of the committee that treasury officials are prepared to present at anytime arguments in support of the proposed revision.*In an analysis of the changes proposed, Mr. Mellon placed first the 25 per cent reduction on incomes below $4,000 and the additional credit of 25 per cent to be granted on earned incomes, showing that in the case of earned incomes of $4,000 or less the reduction contemplated really amounts to about 44 per cent.*Analysis of Changes.Mr. Mellon's analysis of the changes proposed follows:"The normal tax on the first $4,000 of net income is fixed at 3 per cent and upon the remainder of their rooms.*Deputy sheriffs in whose custody they were placed were reticent Sunday as to the manner in which the jurors had passed the time away, but a glance through a partly opened door

These are the facts established by Sheriff Ben Collier of Jackson county, who is leading the search for him in the mysterious incident. No one saw either of the women after they stepped off the train at the Jefferson station.

Whether the woman and her daughter left the train of their own volition while it moved slowly out of the station at Jefferson; whether they left because of the news given; whether they were forcibly abducted from the train, are the questions which have not been established.

Journey Shrouded in Mystery.

Conductor Edward Gofford, of the Georgia & Western, says he never saw them, but he did not take tickets from any passengers from Jefferson to Athens. Neither does he recall seeing the women after they were seen by him on the platform, according to advice from Athens tonight.

According to belief here, the woman and girl may have boarded the

REPUBLICAN SOLON ATTACKS PARTY PLAN

OPPOSES J. J. BROWN

Washington, December 16.—The reapportionment of delegates to the republican national convention decided on by the national committee was attacked today in a statement by Representative Cranton, republican, Michigan, who asked that it be rescinded.

Mr. Cranton said the national committee had no power to change the basis already formulated, and declared the action "increased the danger of that again occurring which in 1912 led to party schism." It proposed he said "to increase the number of delegates who will come from districts where no real party exists."

tomorrow their committee states, which will allow the committees to begin framing legislation. Until these committees begin work, little business can be done in the house.

Adjourn Over Holidays.

One of the main committees of the ways and means committee, of which Representative Green of Iowa, will be chairman, will be in session on the 26th. Cooked stomach of a human being was brought to light.

Hardy rushed to his home and telephoned Sheriff Collier, telling him of the discovery.

He and Dr. J. E. Pendleton, of Jefferson, hurried to the scene by automobile.

Raking in the ashes, they found a hairpin, a portion of a tortoise shell comb, and the partially consumed bones, while the others declared were those of white women.

Alarm Is Given.

This was before the disappearance of Mrs. Simmons and her daughter had been discovered. Immediately, the Hardy telephone, news of the find was broadcast over Jackson county.

Then the search for clues was renewed in the destroyed shack.

Minute examination of the ground failed to reveal any trace of any kind of conveyance in the vicinity.

No footprints either in the yard of the house, the road, or in the ashes, could be found. What appeared to be imprints of mud-crusted shoes in the ashes were also found, where the pair of gloves was found, were seen, but the impression was so faint and so irregular in shape that it was of no value as a leading angle.

Lying on the floor of what had been the dining room of the house, the bodies were about four feet from fireplace. The soot-crusted and blackened bricks, some of which were still in place, pointed crazily at a sudden sky as the sheriff and his sides continued their gruesome search.

Bodie Doster, Sheriff of Jackson county, was the first to arrive.

The bodies were lying head to head, position of the bones indicated. No portions of clothing, shoe buckles, laces or other articles of wear were found. The corpses were nude when laid out on the floor before the torch was applied, the sheriff believed.

"One skull bore marks which indicated that blows from some heavy weapon might have been responsible for death," according to the physician. No other bones were in condition to show marks of violence, if any was committed.

Whether the victim was buried before they were slain, was impossible to determine. It was the belief of officers that death had come before the bodies were laid in the improvised pyre.

News of the discovery brought a stream of people to the scene. At first, no one knew of any persons in a radius of several miles who were missing.

Simons Reports Wife Gone.

Then, after the sheriff had returned to his home in Jefferson to make preparations for organizing a posse and leading a wide search for traces of the supposed slayers, a white-faced man came hurrying to his door. It was Mr. Simons.

"My wife and daughter are gone," he said.

"What do you mean?" said Sheriff Collier.

"They left for Athens yesterday and never got there," said Simons.

This angle injected another phase into the probe. The sheriff immediately started his investigation of the disappearance of Mrs. Simons and Miss Lizzie Simons.

Motive for the supposed slayings was the vital factor which devolved upon the sheriff to determine.

A coroner's jury was called together by Coroner Wood Sunday afternoon.

After discussing the meager details which had been brought to light up to that time, a verdict of "death from causes unknown" was returned.

Buried Near Death Spot.

At a drizzling rain poured unceasingly from a leaden sky this afternoon, a simple burial ceremony was held in a oddball burial ground on the Benet farm, within a stone's throw of the pile of charred timbers which marked the crematory of two women. A fresh pile of muddy earth was piled by the side of a newly dug grave. The raindrops cut tiny channels through the clods.

A few words were said and the mortal remains of the two victims of a mysterious death were consigned to earth. The grave was filled in as rain drops beat a solemn dirge on the dark heads of the little group of spectators.

The husband and father stood a little apart, twisting a battered hat in his shaking hands. Rain and tears coursed down his cheeks to death.

Posse Forms at Grave.

Tension of this ceremony snapped as the final earth was heaped upon the grave. A posse was improvised, and grim men started to scour the country for the perpetrators of the deed.

Fair into the night, bands were exploring possible hiding places for miles around. Torches glowed through the mist and blackness.

As reconstructed by the officers in charge, the searchers found the two women were attacked somewhere in the neighborhood of Clarkesboro. A struggle, in which the women were overpowered and then slain, ensued.

Then, in the dead of night, the slayers left the scene, fled to the abandoned farm house, laid them on the rotting floor, applied the torch, vanished into the night. They left the flames to obliterate all trace of the crime and the slain.

Mrs. Simons is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Doster, a son, and her husband.

She and her husband were employed in the local cotton mill.

Kwanian Election.

Jackson, Ga., December 16.—(Special).—Officers will be elected by the Kwanian club of Jackson, Tuesday evening December 19. Nominations are being received by a committee consisting of T. A. Nutt, L. P. McKibben and S. H. Eiseman. The club, which is now completing its second year, has won a vital factor in the growth and progress of the entire county and the membership is now more enthusiastic than ever before.

HENRY STANFORD DIES AT HOSPITAL

Prominent Cotton Broker Had Been Ill for Several Months—Funeral Services This Morning.

Henry K. Stanford, of 56 Penn Avenue, well-known cotton broker, of Atlanta, member of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange and the Atlanta Commercial Exchange, died at a local hospital early Sunday morning following an operation, the culmination of a period of illness that has extended over several months.

Mr. Stanford, who was fifty-five years of age, has been associated with the cotton business for a number of years, and besides his own interests in the trade represented Atkinson & Company, cotton brokers of New Orleans. He had been a member of the Atlanta Commercial Exchange for many years, and was one of the most active workers in the organization. He was a founder and the driving force for the new exchange building. Mr. Stanford was one of the largest subscribers in this movement.

He was born in Georgia, educated in this state, and was a member of the Chautauqua Franklin Club.

He is survived by his widow, three children, his mother, Mrs. E. J. Stanford; one brother, Rev. J. H. Stanford, of Adel, Ga., and two sisters, Misses Nellie and Amelia Stanford, of this city.

Funeral services will be held at 11 o'clock Monday morning at Patterson's funeral parlors, and the Citizens & Southern Bank will be the repository. The services will be conducted by the Rev. W. H. Thompson, pastor of the First Methodist Church.

Services will be held at 11 o'clock Monday morning at Patterson's funeral parlors, and the Citizens & Southern Bank will be the repository.

France Declines to Exult Over Reparations Progress

Even Conciliatory Note to Germany Written by Poincare Fails to Stir Enthusiasm.

Paris, December 16.—(By the Associated Press).—There is a feeling in the more optimistic quarters of France that the reparations question has made a great step forward since last Sunday. The majority, however, are of the opinion that the note of the French government, although they have somewhat dispelled the gloom darkening the horizon of Franco-German relations since the Ruhr occupation, have not greatly cleared the skies, but merely have rendered the situation less hopeless.

The genuine disappointment with which the proposals emanating from Berlin have been received in official and diplomatic circles in Paris appears to be neutral rather than one of the reasons why the pessimism of last week had no particular cheering effect on French public opinion.

France Not Impressed.

The permission granted by the United States government to representatives American citizens to sit on special committees appointed by the German government to study the German budget and stabilization of the currency, immediately followed by invitations to Brigadier General Dawes and Gen. D. Yost to visit the American representatives, and the telegrams which requests to Paris and Brussels that direct negotiations be resumed between Germany, France and Belgium on the Ruhr and Rhine land questions, favorably considered by M. Poincare and M. Julesz appear to have made a deeper impression abroad than in France.

An official announcement this evening says:

"The German and French governments are in complete accord upon the principle of the reply to Germany."

Reply Is Conciliatory.

The failure of the plane to improve in the German air market in spite of the company's advertising of the situation politically—the dollar being quoted around 19 and sterling at $21.2—pointed to the extent that financial circles are not finding too much hope on the pending negotiations.

Some financiers are of the opinion that the political situation is not responsible for the depreciation of the franc. The accumulation of gold and silver money for payment, and the sum of a 13,000,000,000 franc loan scheduled to be floated the first week in January are said to be the real causes.

Only Change in Words.

"Chancellor Marx is simply taking up the thread of the Cuno and Stremme man's maneuver. Germany, while using every device to implement a radical negative to the plan inaugurated January 11. The German proposal, while couched in more conciliatory terms—the era of protest has ended—but is no less a refusal to collaborate in the work of the reparation commission on the execution of the Versailles treaty."

The Temps, somewhat more moderate in its nationalistic policy than the Echo de Paris, says:

"Swamped by a terrifying financial and social crisis due to inflation of the currency, the reich is casting longing eyes upon the occupied territories. Berlin would like to resume taxing the Rhineland and the Ruhr and their treasures, by pledging the Ruhr treasures as security for capturing powers have reasons for not delivering the Ruhr and the Rhineland over for such experiences; the population of the occupied territories now are more than ever ready to pay the payment of reparations, thanks to the system of productive pledges. We cannot permit the regime of the reich in its full distress to be prematurely extended to regions just entering upon independence."

Fear No Treaty.

On the other hand the Journal des Debats closer to the financial element and more optimistic, says: "We should not fear of being led into a trap."

The Marx and Stremme man's desire of involving us into such a trap there is no doubt. But are we children in arms that we should fear such an eventuality? There is a certain method to follow so that we may not be led astray. It consists of separating entirely the question some of the execution of the treaties from that of reorganization of the occupied territories. We cannot neglect any occasion to improve the situation."

FOR BREVITY AS EXPECTED.

Paris, December 16.—The French government has accepted, with limitations, the German proposals submitted by Herr von Hoesch, charge d'affaires, concerning the reparation Germany desires to enter into with France, as well as Belgium, on the Ruhr and Rhine land questions.

The reply which was handed to Herr von Hoesch this evening takes the form generally expected, according to an official summary issued by the government.

It is pointed out that as the German government already has made known the import of its proposals, there will not be any delay imposed by the size of the French reply.

Always Ready to Confer.

Passive resistance, having apparently ceased in the Ruhr, Premier Poincare declares that he is always ready to confer with the German government on all questions which this government wishes to bring before him; at the same time he remarks that he regards such questions as of equal interest to the allies, and therefore the French government reserves the right of concerting with them before replying.

With respect to reparations before the trial, the French government has agreed to accept the German proposal.

First Airplane Hopped Off At Kitty Hawk 20 Years Ago

UNITED STATES REFUSED WRIGHT INVENTION

BY E. B. MACDONALD.

French government, as it has frequently declared, will never consent to take that question out of the hands of the commission instituted by the League of Nations, which is not strictly conforming with the treaty. The commission, adds M. Poincare, will continue to function with all the powers conferred upon it and within its rights, so far as relate to Germany, nothing diminished in any possible manner.

No Treaty Revision.

The exchange of ideas proposed by Germany, to which the French government does not refuse to assent itself, continues the reply. "It can therefore have for its object infringement of the prerogatives of this commission, nor can it be a preparatory step, direct or indirect, for revision of the treaty."

In that short space of time, the speed of the airplane has been increased 600 per cent and its carrying capacity to ten times the original amount.

Lieutenant Colonel C. de F. Chandler, retired, U. S. A., who was a pioneer in the development of the airplane as a fighting machine, pointed out that the phenomenal development of the airplane has been made during the past fifteen years.

The Wright brothers tried to sell their idea to the government, but were unsuccessful. It was not until 1908 that their plan was finally accepted by the signal corps," Chandler said.

Role Does Not Fit.

Colonel Chandler, a quiet, unassuming man, is far from the type one would expect to inaugurate an airplane as a combat machine. He is not the successful business man with his merry blue eyes and sandy hair, rather than the father of one of the most deadly branches of the army. But he goes the honor of being the first man to fly an airplane from an airplane. In June, 1912, the colonel, then a captain, inaugurated the airplane as a combat arm of the service. It had previously been thought of merely as a weapon for observation and observation purposes. But it was not until the World War that the airplane was finally recognized as one of the most efficient weapons of war.

War Gave Real Push.

"The war," the colonel said, "gave aviation the impulse it needed. Many persons make the mistake of thinking that practically all the development of the airplane came during the war, but since the armistice was signed the speed of the airplane has been increased 200 per cent and its carrying capacity, as typified in the huge Barrington bomber, has increased more than 100 per cent."

Before the airplane can make any more rapid advances, Colonel Chandler pointed out, two big improvements are necessary.

"A new and more trustworthy type of motor must be developed. A turbine motor is being worked on and a mercury vapor motor is being developed. Both of the accidents are caused by defective motors."

Work on Reeling Wings.

"—Some method of 'reefing' the wings of a plane must be devised. When a wing is rising in a needful position, the wing surface that way it is is the tail, and once in the air a large wing capacity slows it up. If some method whereby wing surface could be increased, decreased at will were devised, a plane would stop safely and the tail of the accident is avoided by defective motors."

RESCUE STAND FAST IN VAIN EFFORT TO SAVE.

Marsfield, Ore., December 16.—At least ten members of the lumber schooner C. A. Smith are believed to have lost their lives Sunday when the vessel was wrecked on Coos bar, bar harbor.

Seven others have been rescued. The principal loss of life occurred when small boat from the Smith foundered after putting off from the wreck shortly before noon. The boat was unable to capsize with eight or ten men in it, none of whom have since been seen.

W. G. Prescott, mate of the war tug Wilson, which went out to the rescue of the Smith's crew, was drowned when swept overboard from the tub by a giant wave.

Figures of Men Visible.

In darkness shrouded the raging sea Sunday night, figures of men could still be seen on board the stricken schooner, as frantic efforts were being made by their seven rescued comrades and guards on shore to rig a breeches buoy to save their lives.

The Smith, a specially built steam tug, which had been fouled on the bar, he was swept away and then rescued by the life saving crew from the nearby coast guard station.

But again, a few minutes later, he was swept into the sea, along with Charles Norstrom, one of the guards.

Norstrom was saved, but Prescott was not seen again.

ENGLAND PUTS MAILS ON U. S. S. LEVIATHAN

London, December 16.—Because of her speed the British postoffice yesterday shipped the English Christmas mails on board the American steamer Leviathan, which sailed from Southampton, the second time the great liner has been selected by the British postoffice for delivery to a British vessel for the quick delivery of mail to the United States.

that the survivors as first reported were the only ones saved. Only two life boats were launched, the Modoc reported, the one picked up by the W. W. Mills with the four survivors and the second found by the Modoc with its occupants dead.

Bodies Recovered.

The Modoc's message did not say how many bodies had been recovered during today's search. Floating bodies had been sighted by the W. W. Mills and the Modoc and Minnie, a small pleasure boat, had been sent to the scene.

No opinions have been expressed as to whether the Runa had capsized. She was a small steamer, but was considered in good condition and has been plying trade on the Atlantic for years. She bunkered at Newport News December 9, proceeded to Savannah the same day. She arrived at Savannah Tuesday, and was sailing Wednesday for Liverpool.

The Modoc will remain in the vicinity until the hope of finding more bodies is given up.

Officials here were doubtful to whether this could have been done in view of the rough seas. Early yesterday night from the Modoc said it was too rough to attempt to transfer the five survivors from the W. W. Mills and that that steamer was proceeding to Sabine, Texas.

Prospects for New Year Engage Business World

New York, December 16.—(By the Associated Press)—With the holidays approaching, interest in financial and business quarters is turning increasingly toward the prospects for business.

A seasonal slackening of production, which has been general during the month, shows by short downs for inventories and repairs is noticeable, but optimism prevails with regard to the maintenance of a high rate of consumption and to an early increase in buying. The holiday season is reported satisfactory.

Buying of steel products for first quarter delivery has come largely from automobile manufacturers. Shipments, however, are still running ahead of orders. Building activity is holding up remarkably well and the times entertained hopes of a renewed buying movement in railroad equipment.

The unexpected reduction of the Chicago and Northwestern dividend has more than offset the effect of the cut for the carriers. The market was accentuated by the difficulty experienced in selecting a chairman for the senate committee on interstate commerce.

Car loadings for the week ended December 1 showed a sharp falling off, due to the Thanksgiving holiday.

Great confusion prevailed in the cotton market.

The ginning report of the previous Saturday demonstrated that earlier public crop estimates had been much too low; the magnitude of the miscalculation was revealed Wednesday when the first government crop report placed the yield at 30,012,000 bales.

On Friday the census bureau's consumption report showed that American mills used 532,000 tons during November, which represented a higher daily rate than that for October.

The price of the commodity meanwhile fluctuated rapidly over a wide range. The May future dropped to 33 cents, which is 4 1/4 cents below the recent high, and closed the week at 33 1/2 cents. Southern selling and profit taking were heavy on railroads, while trade buying appeared on reactions.

Prices for foreign exchange held comparatively steady, uncertainty over the domestic political situation in Great Britain being offset by several signs of progress in the negotiations negotiations.

A slightly easier tone characterized the market for commercial paper, the best names going at 4 3/4 percent. The federal reserve statements, however, revealed the fact that holder demand for currency was being fed. Gold holdings declined moderately and both circulation and rediscounts have increased.

GEORGE STALLINGS THOUGHT WAGNER BAD PROSPECT

George Robinson Runs Out of Bout With Flowers

Plans To Substitute Sailor Darden, Former Champ, Or Lee Anderson in Bout

Walk Miller's greatest trouble is securing opponents for his dusky champion, Tiger Flowers. Battling Siki recently refused an offer to box Flowers and now comes George Robinson with an excuse that he can't appear here December 28.

Fans will remember Robinson as the Boston negro of gingerbread hue who fought Flowers a fast twelve round go at the stadium just before Thanksgiving. The fight is the dusky colored boxer put up was just about the best exhibition that the local fans have witnessed in quite a while.

Following this fight when promotional outfitting a fight for the Christmas holidays, the Flowers-Robinson affair was the favorite in the opinion of the local fans. J. Walk Miller then started negotiations to bring Robert Rodes here for the night of December 28.

Robinson wanted a great deal larger guarantee to return here than he received. Thanksgiving, Miller acceded to his request and thought that it was certain that Robinson would return for the affair, but Sunday afternoon news was received from Boston that Robinson would not be able to appear here.

HOMER HAWORTH IS RATED AS CONSISTENT PLAYER

Fort Worth, Texas, December 16.—Catcher Homer Haworth, who was sold a few days ago by the Fort Worth Texas league baseball team to Atlanta, has agreed to a combination that will see him in the World's Four Texas league pennants and three Dixie championships in the last for seasons.

Haworth, 29 years of age, joined the Fort Worth team in 1917, but after a few weeks he quit, took his baseball uniform into one of Uncle Sam's recruiting stations and served in the army. In 1919 he returned to the Panthers' fold and served faithfully and well through the campaigns of 1919, 20, 21, 22 and 23.

The tall, lanky catcher came as a surprise to Fort Worth fans and followers of Texas league baseball. He is the youngest of the brace of receivers who have proved to be as good if not the best receiver in the league. It is generally thought that Haworth is good for several more seasons.

He is regarded as one of the best thinking maskmen of the Texas loop, has the ability to get the best out of pitchers' hits and fields well and can throw to all bases with speed and accuracy. He is a player who has personality and has become exceptionally popular in Fort Worth and in other cities of the league.

Until last season he hit over the three hundred mark. In injury the early part of the season kept him off the field for weeks and it was not until mid-season that he regained his form.

His 1923 averages are as follows:

Batting—77 games at bat 236, runs 22, hits 64, total bases 77, two base hits, 10, three base hits 0, home run 1, sacrifice hits 16, base on balls 18, on-base percentage .311, runs batted in 20, average .250.

Fielding—75 games out 315, assists 76, errors 6, passed balls 3, average .985.

For 1923 he had 341 and fielded for an average of .945.

Haworth's full name is Howard Haworth. He throws right and bats left handed. His home is in Portland, Oregon. He started playing ball in 1913 with Pendleton, Oregon.

Bernstein Will Fight Dundee

New York, December 16.—With the spirit of St. Nicholas adding steam to their punches, Johnny Dundee, last of the Garibaldies and Jack Bernstein, the slugging Rabbi's son from Yonkers, will entertain fight fans here Saturday night at Madison Square Garden Monday night. A remarkable feature will be that part of the proceeds will go to a Christmas fund for New York's out-of-luck youngsters, and not to the box office.

Both Johnny and the Macabees entry will carry titles into the ring. Dundee, the featherweight coronet, and Bernstein, the junior lightweight appendage, Johnny, however, is certain to win the bout with at least title left, as only Bernstein's will be at stake. Dundee will fight at 127 pounds, three pounds above the featherweight limit, and Bernstein 129.

Bernstein's outburst of Christmas cheer will come from the ring without a crown on his Christmas tree or in his stocking. He declared Sunday, however, that he will treat Dundee to an evening even more tempestuous than the one a few days back when his death altered his plans. Havers and Ockenden will hasten away from the golfless chill of the metropolitan district and drive down to Pinehurst, N. C.

From there they go to San Francisco, where Havers will meet Gene Sarazen, January 18. If they had played it last summer, it would have been for the unofficial championship of America's leading golfing magazine, "Golf and Putt." This week, however, the pair will compete in the most important tournament here, but his father's death altered his plans. Havers and Ockenden will hasten away from the golfless chill of the metropolitan district and drive down to Pinehurst, N. C.

From there they go to San Francisco, where Havers will meet Gene Sarazen, January 18. If they had played it last summer, it would have been for the unofficial championship of America's leading golfing magazine, "Golf and Putt."

On the strength of his record, Havers has been leaving a lot of bantams prostate in his wake recently, and fans are consistently amused by his obvious dislike for anyone who faces him in a ring. Kid Sullivan and Babe Herman, the native son, who is winning in the east, complete the boys.

PILE CURED WITHOUT SURGERY

An instructive book has been published by Dr. T. W. Hughes, the medical director of the first of Atlanta. This book tells how sufferers can quickly and easily cure themselves without the use of drugs, "hot" iron, electricity and other torturing or humiliating methods without confinement to bed or hospital bills to pay. This book is free to persons afflicted with piles. Ex-

ATHLETIC REPORT AT PENN SHOWS INCREASE

Philadelphia, December 16.—The financial report of the University of Pennsylvania athletic council for the academic year of 1922-23, made public tonight, shows that during the first year of the new stadium, the receipts were almost double the total for 1921-22, the last year of the old field.

The revenue for the first year of the new stadium was $377,724 with expenditures of $304,327. These figures do not include the football season just ended. It is understood that the receipts this fall were considerably in excess of those for 1922.

Only three of the 19 sports earned a profit. The soccer, football, track and basketball teams earned a net profit of $183,263. Track, due to the popularity of the relay carnival, earned a profit of $3,724. Basketball earned $694, the smallest profit this sport has turned in for many years.

Boyle Is Winner.

GA. TO START CAGE TOUR SOON

Athens, Ga., December 16.—The University of Georgia basketball team will get a way on its annual schedule on January 1, when a week's swing around the state will commence.

The initial game will be staged in Columbus against the five representatives of the state of that city. On the following night the Macon "Y" will be tackled for the first time in several years. The game will be played in Macon. On the night of the third the Columbus "Y" will be met and then the tour will start of the month. Camp Benning will draw a second game in Columbus.

The week will be wound up in Atlanta, where the crack "Y" team of the city will offer opposition.

The trip will be the fifth of the year for the team in these games, all preparatory to the college season, some definite line can be gotten on what kind of a team the university will turn out this year. Later Auburn, Mercer, North Carolina, the Atlanta Athletic Club and other teams of the South will be met here and on the opponents' own courts.

The team is practicing on the court of the city of M. C. A. while the gymnasium courts are set up in the Alumni building, and early progress is reported. The addition of Captain Gurr to the team strengthened it greatly, and with several additions from the freshman squad of last year prospects are unusually bright.

Lee Anderson has also made many of the other leading fighters of the country, and holds a knockout over them.

Either Darden or Anderson will make a worthy substitute for Robinson in the big holiday fight.

W. & J. Grid List Is Announced

Washington, Penn., December 16.—Grove City replaces Washington and Lee in the 1924 football schedule of Washington and Jefferson college. At the same time it was announced that the presidents would have a yearling team in the field, the freshman rule going into effect at W. & J. next year. Few other changes were made in the schedule which follows:

September 27—Geneva at Washington.

October 4—Bethany at Wheeling, W. Va.

October 11—Grove City at Washington.

October 18—Carnegie Tech at Washington.

October 25—Lafayette at New York.

November 1—Detroit at Detroit.

November 8—Wagnersburg at Washington.

November 15—Pitt at Pittsburgh.

November 22—West Virginia at Morgantown.

Former Champ May Come Back

Philadelphia, December 16.—Spring rolls the snow nards off the fairways in a few months, one of Fairway's leading golfers, and for the open professional title may be golfer who has spent the last few years in the shadows of an asylum.

Jack McDermott, whose mind went astray before the war, after he had twice corralled the open championship of the United States, is back to the world again, though, with his eyes as keen as ever for gauging the distant flag, and his fingers curling as tenderly as old around the midiron and mashie.

McDermott, who visited McDermott at his Norristown refuge recently, has returned full of enthusiasm about McDermott's chances for a comeback.

"He's got his eye in the ball again," Hagen declared, and told of a few masterly crisp and deadly shots that ex-champion achieved with his clubs, after a six-year absence from the game.

Two weeks ago friends took McDermott to the Penn State Whittemore, the Penn State Whittemore, and while he astounded a fast foursome by turning in a card of 38, despite several putts that rimmed the cup, a trio of experts who played with him still have retained every bit of skill.

From there they go to San Francisco, where Havers will meet Gene Sarazen, January 18. If they had played it last summer, it would have been for the unofficial championship of America's leading golfing magazine, "Golf and Putt."

On the strength of his record, Havers has been leaving a lot of bantams prostate in his wake recently, and fans are consistently amused by his obvious dislike for anyone who faces him in a ring. Kid Sullivan and Babe Herman, the native son, who is winning in the east, complete the boys.

Culture of Tobacco Attracting Interest In Valdosta Region

Jackson, Ga., December 16.—(Special)—Plans are being made to take a large number of the chicken growers of Carrollton and Carrollton to inspect the poultry industry in that section. This is part of the program to arouse greater interest in the poultry industry here. The past week a small number of men from Carroll county poultry show and inspected several of the chicken farms around Carrollton and Villa Rica. Members of the party returned home full of enthusiasm over what they saw and efforts will be made to place Carrollton on the map as an important poultry center. A drive is now on for new members for the Butts County Poultry association.

J. P. C. Quint Beats Fort Five

Valdosta, Ga., December 16.—(Special)—John F. Lewis, president of the Citizens bank, spent several days in Florida in the interest of tobacco-growing. Mr. Lewis has been very active in giving out the best possible information regarding the growing of tobacco. Interest in tobacco-growing all through this section is now taking on a more active and acute form as the time for planting grows nearer. Farmers who have been growing tobacco have found the latter now are voluntarily signing up and securing their supply of seed, and during the few weeks remaining before planting time it is expected that there will be a very considerable addition to the list of growers both in south Georgia and north Florida.

Grant excelled for the soldiers, as stated by his running mate, Tedesco.

ROY WATERS ELECTED GRIDIRON CAPTAIN

McRae, December 16.—(Special)—South Georgia College finished its most successful football season in years with an elaborate banquet for the boys and their girls on Saturday evening at the college dining hall. There were some thirty or forty present.

At a meeting of the letter men held yesterday afternoon Roy "Pluto" Waters was elected captain for the 1924 season. "Pluto" has been one of the most successful gridiron gains on the field this year. He is known to be a fine pitcher. "Pluto" is very popular not only with the players but also with the student body.

Duncan "Schemer" Graham was re-elected business manager for 1924. He has promised an unusually good schedule for next year with many fine games.

Referees, Perry, of Y. M. C. A.

Hoblitzell Has Not Signed Up

Charlotte, N. C., December 16.—Positive denial that Dick Hoblitzell had been signed to manage the Charlotte baseball club of the South Atlantic league was made by Felix Heyman and W. M. Moore, owners of the club. The return team last night from the annual joint meeting of baseball leagues at Chicago.

"We never talked to him about it," they declared, "when asked about the report from Chicago Thursday that the former Boston player, who managed the local team last season, had been signed again.

Hans Tries Hero Antics And Loses Opportunity To Play With Phillies

BY ERNST WAGNER.

Manager Barrow, I think, took a sort of fancy to me. He must have made him laugh. He knew that I could hit that baseball—sook the old onion, as they call it nowadays—and let me do a lot of things. I played a short end, just except pitch. He had heard about my pitching in Akron. He did let me pitch in an exhibition game once. I was always willing and eager to do anything. I was a big husky boy and simply loved to play baseball.

Well, I was playing with Paterson when they got up the first idea of playing night baseball. You see, that idea is not new at all.

Barrow and McKee made arrangements for our team to play the first night game at Wilmington, Del. They had placed all illumination by electric light. It looked like a success. When darkness came on and the crowd got there the prospects didn't look so good.

The light was too dim to see a line fly and it was impossible to make a good catch in the outfield. To hit an ordinary baseball you have to be on top of the question. They had made up a sort of baseball like the indoor baseballs they use now. It was even harder to see that.

The public was disappointed from the beginning. As they got worse and worse and gave everything the razz. The players began to take the thing as a joke.

Wilmington had a pitcher named Andre who was quite a kidder. He had been playing and got myself to get him to pitch. The second game was up he pitched the big white-looking baseball at me and when I smacked into it the whole thing exploded and came near blowing up the place.

They had a good time, put it in the hall, the noise, the talk, just to have a laugh on me. They certainly did get one. I'll never forget that thing flashing and going off like a cannon when I slammed it.

The crowd didn't get any laugh, though. Instead, they got a box office to get their money back.

What Stallings Wouldn't Give.

Before McKee and Barrow came to New York they had a good deal of talk about how I was sneaked to Louisville and all that but the deal was made just as I have told it. Barrow kept his word. It was even harder to see that.

Jim Robinson. Jerry had invited Miss Van Wyck and Miss Gore to dinner the following day. "The way he was referring to her, I could see he was referring to her," remarked Uncle Jack.

"By the way, Roger, we'll be five instead of four for dinner tomorrow."

"Who now?"

"A friend of Marcia's, Channing Lloyd, a chap from town. He came up yesterday."

I had heard of Channing Lloyd, who at 30 could have unprofitably shared his omniscience with me.

At dinner, the following night, we made a curious party. Marcia Van Wyck, radiant in pale green, with her admirers one at either hand; Channing Lloyd, dark massive well-grown boy, who seemed an air of complete domination of the air; Jerry at the other side, rolling bread-pills and forcing humor rather awkwardly; Miss Gore, solemn in black satin—all of them elegant and ornate in evening clothes. saw in Lloyd, I think, the attraction of Marcia. His looks, his topics, his appetites were animal and gross. He frank continuously, smoked after his salad, and monopolized the guess of the others. Fragments of their talk reached me, of which I understood a little—Greek to Jerry.

A few days after that Jerry left town again. Marcia's birthday was close again. Several weeks passed and I had hardly settled back into my routine at the manor when a message came from Jack Ballard asking me to come down for a few days. I inferred that he had heard something about Jerry, and, of course, I lost no time in getting to the city and to his apartment.

"Pope, my boy, I knew you'd come. But you're welcome. You're so alarmed, Jerry's all right. He hasn't even run off with a chorus lady!"

"Well, what has he done?" I asked.

"Not much—merely engaged to be some one of the principals in a prize fight in Madison Square Garden."

"The man I have in impatience, where you heard this extravagancy?"

"From the extravagant, tomfool himself, Jerry, last night. I'm afraid there's no doubt about it."

"The articles of agreement are signed, the money, $5,000 a side, in the hands of the stakeholders—"

Mike Finnegan, a friend of Flynn's, keeps a saloon upon the Bowery."

"Preposterous! It hasn't come out, the newspapers?"

"They're full enough of it as it is."

"Jerry's opponent is a very prominent one—an amateur, I hear. The right title, unless a one that Jack Lauder, otherwise known as 'The Terrible Sailor, champion of the navy,'

"But your father—the public!—"

"It will ruin Jerry, ruin him."

"With a bit of luck, Jerry's enmity has been carefully kept."

At Flynn's gymnasium he's called Jim Robinson, and it's Jim Robinson. Flynn's wonderful unknown, he will make his public appearance."

"He must be insane to do such a thing, it's Flynn who's put him up to this."

"I think not. If I understand Jerry correctly, he urged Flynn to make the match. He's quite keen about it."

"I repeat, it isn't like him, Jerry. Somebody has put this idea into his head."

I stopped so abruptly that Ballard regarded me curiously.

I raced the floor with long strides, my fingers twitching to get that pretty devil by the throat. I knew now—it had come in a flash of light—Marcia. Jerry listened now to no one but Marcia; but I couldn't tell Jack.

"Somebody—somebody at Flynn's," I muttered.

"But the boy is immune to flattery. There isn't a vain bone in his body. I wonder he puzzles me. But I think you'll find he's quite stub-born about it."

"Stubborn, yes, but—"

My remark was cut short by a ring of the bell, and Jerry entered.

"We're having a party, what's my gift today?" he laughed.

"I've just been telling Roger," Jack began gravely, "about your fight with Clancy, Jerry."

"Uncle Jack. He objects, I suppose."

"Not object," I said quickly. "It's the wrong word, Jerry. You're your own master, of course. We were just wondering whether he hadn't under-valued responsibility, not asking our advice before making your plans."

Jerry followed a pattern in the ring with the point of his stick.

"I wish you hadn't put it just that way, Roger. You don't undervalue your friends." You know, Jerry, Roger, too, Uncle Jack. I suppose I should have said something about it. But I—just sort of drifted into it. If nobody knows who I am, I can't see what harm it does."

"I don't consider your own interests," I said, "what you must consider is that you've no right to jeopardize the property interests of those who have put their money and their faith behind the enterprise with which you're connected. You're already in a responsible position. You're making yourself a mountebank, a laughing-stock."

"I'm sorry, Roger, if you think there are any losses involved," said Jerry coolly. "I don't. And besides, I'm too far in this thing to back out now."

There was no shaking his resolution. We pleaded with him, argued, cajoled, ridiculed, but all to no purpose. Jack Ballard was so incensed at this insincerity that he swore at the top of his voice, flying out of the room and disappeared.

With a sober expression Jerry watched him go out and then rose and went to his study, closing the door at his insistence. I knew his manner. Confession was on the tip of his tongue, and yet he would not speak. But I waited patiently. Finally the silence became oppressive.

"You see, Marcia?" I asked carefully.

"Yes," he said. "You see, Marcia—" he bit his lip, reddened and came to a full stop. For a fraction of a minute he paused and then went on, slurring the whole thing in his old boorish way.

"You see, Marcia's very broad-

Roger. She's really very much interested in the whole thing. It was a good deal of a surprise to me. It began when she heard about my bout with Sagorski. She was awfully keen about my gym. She thought every man ought to develop his body to its fullest capability. I had Flynn out one night at Briar Hills. I didn't tell you about that—that you mightn't understand—and we sparred six fast rounds. She kept the score.

"I see," I said thoughtfully. "Then Marcia's idea, wasn't it?" He hesitated a moment before replying.

"Your mind is made up then—irreversibly?"

I had not known Jerry all these years for nothing. I shugged my shoulders and sank into my chair again. Then, of course, there's money to start with right away, won't there?"

"You almost take my breath away," she said at last. "It's very bewitching," she smiled. "But isn't there someone else to be consulted?"

"No," he cried, "I think a little triumphantly. "Now, I, I'm my own master. I can do as I please. I've got five thousand? Five thousand more right away? And then five thousand more the first of each month?"

She started back in her chair and gazed at him in an expression of mingled interest and dismay.

"Five thousand?"

"Five thousand?" she said eagerly.

She paused and then smiled brightly across the table at him.

"I'll try," she said quietly.

"Jerry gave a great gasp. "By Jove, I said with a boisterous laugh. "I can't want to pitch in down here some day and do what I can myself. You've got to do it, Una—but let me give you some money to start with right away, won't there?"

"We might add a day nursery—" she murmured thoughtfully.

"Yes," he cried, "I think a little triumphantly. "Now, I, I'm my own master. I can do as I please. I've got five thousand? Five thousand more right away? And then five thousand more the first of each month?"

He reached across the table, upsetting a teacup, and seized her hands in both of his.

"Oh, you will, Una, won't you?"

She withdrew her hands gently and looked at him on her lips a queer little crooked smile.

"I'll try," she said quietly.

"Jerry gave a great gasp. "By Jove, I said with a boisterous laugh. "I can't tell you what a relief it is to get this off my mind. I know I ought to be down here helping, but I—I can't just now. Uncle Jack—that's Ballard Junior—says I've got a place in the world to keep up and a lot of trouble."

"That's very right and proper—of course," she said, gathering up her hair.

"He noted the motion. "You don't go yet, Una. There are a lot of things I'd like to ask you about, but I—I can't just now. Uncle Jack—that's Ballard Junior—says I've got a place in the world to keep up and a lot of trouble."

"But I'll let me see you and talk to you about things, won't you?"

"Of course, I'll have to make an accounting of your money—"

"I'll pay the check. You'll get it tomorrow."

"But, Jerry—"

"Your address, please," he insisted with a stern and business-like air.

The moment was propitious. They would certainly see me when they got up so when their heads were bent over the slip of paper the waiter brought, I quietly rose, and, braving detection, went out of the door.

Jerry kept his word. His check for Una's day nursery went forward on the day following their meeting and Jerry found time in the interval between Marcia's business and the gymnasium to call upon Una and give over in the end what the great project in which their interest was involved. I heard little of these few meetings, for after a short visit with Ballard, during which we discussed Jerry's plans in despair, I went back to the Manor to resume my much-needed work.

"Phew! They're getting 'warm,' Pope. Somebody's leaked."

He rang the bell, instructing his man to go out on the street and buy a blue fog of tobacco smoke, through which beyond the glare of the ring, tiny spots of light flashed and disappeared in the gallery the smokers lighted in the basement. My seat was in a box, in the second row of boxes, the first row being just back of the press seats which were always the sides of the ring. ### A Plea for Santa Claus!

WRITTEN BY JULIA HOYT

(Copyright, 1923, in U. S. and Canada by North American News-paper Alliance.)

Christmas—the word of all others powerful enough to bring youth and mirth! The thronged stores in gala dress, the atmosphere of evergreen and holly, kindly thought, good cheer—and above all, children! Christmas day is children's day. It is the time when the show of us who are not wedded with children, or who have had and lost them, realize their absence more poignantly than ever.

It seems to me that the tendency of the present is toward killing the charm and gaiety of Christmas Day. Perhaps this is logical and necessary in the scheme of our "progression," but to me—an absurdly sentimental soul—it seems a great pity. I suppose the wonder of old days and Yule log, the punch bowl, and the Christmas jollity of song and story are gone forever—recall it might be a strain to gather around the convivial punch-bowl of lemonade!

Never Done Any Harm

But it goes even beyond that. I am afraid (if I may wryingly inform my readers) that even the wonderful, mysterious Santa Claus is being done away with. They say the reason for this is that the modern parents, having fireplaces, have made impossible the traditional descent down the chimney; and I have been told by literal-minded "advanced" mothers that one should not teach one's children untruths—but it is all right, may be all wrong, but still I am convinced that the "undruth" of Santa Claus has never done any child any harm. It is a beautiful symbol of kindness and indulgent generosity—the benign Santa who brings to every one the most desired. Every one must face reality, I am afraid. Why, the very thought of the most delightful illusions—and later affectionate memory!

Personally, I would not give up the days of my belief in Santa Claus and his magical gifts, nor would I like to find no anything in the world. Even if she is a living and vivid figure in my mind—the postcard Santa of my childhood, red coat, apple cheeks, white beard, pack and reindeer.

Perchance I am a fanatic on the subject of keeping romance and beauty in life—but if I am, I am glad of it! It would be hard to convince me that any child can derive pleasure from a fairy tale, or that its imagination is a lonely and lovely way. Harming is done him by frightening him with untruths of horrors that will befall him if he is naughty, but never, I am sure, by teaching him to know and love the kindly Santa Claus—the symbol of Christmas spirit. After all, Santa Claus is the spirit of Christ made colloquial and entirely comprehensible to the child's mind.

Blanche, according to the way I know her, answered the letters of rich and poor alike; her loves and powers were unbounded. No one could appeal to him and be unanswered.

That is the spirit of Christmas, and Santa Claus stands for that.

That, but why take away from our children the wonderful thrill of lying in bed wondering if that dear jolly old man would drop down the chimney and fill their stockings with all the things they have so carefully asked for in their letters on the mantel.

She makes a heartfelt plea for the birth of Santa Claus for our children, and conserving the magic and fairy tales of life for them as long as it is possible.

THE COMPLEXION IN WINTER. I have been talking quite a bit recently about the various skin treatments suitable for winter weather. A great many women seem to complain within the last few days complaining of rough and ugly skin. The sharp cold weather does it. Winter fogs and frosts are always hard on the complexion until the skin is acclimated.

Here is an ideal cold cream for winter weather. It is a little heavier than most of the creams you buy, which after all, are nothing more nor less than cleansing creams. As this one contains vegetable oil it will readily be absorbed by the skin and it will protect it against winter winds:

Fine Cold Cream:

Rose water ..... 4 ounces
Almond oil ..... 4 ounces
Spermatic ..... 1 ounce
White wax ..... 1 ounce
Benzoin ..... 30 grains

As this formula has been printed before I have no doubt that many of my readers are already familiar with it. I prefer this one made with almond oil but if you must be very economical here is one that is almost as good.

This cream is made almost entirely of wax. The wax and perfume are melted in the oil until they are just blended, then the rose water, benzoin and benzoin (a little more than luke warm) are added slowly, and the whole is stirred and beaten until it begins to congeal. This is then poured into small jars.

If you are going out in very cold weather a little of this cream should be rubbed well into the skin, wiped off with soft cloth or tissue paper, and the face is tendered. Every day when you are about to wash the face, rub first with a little of this cream, and then wash with warm water and soap. Or use as a massage water.

Blanche. Pimples are often the result of a run-down condition of health, and since you are so much underweight, it is possible this is your trouble. An excellent thing for you would be cod-liver oil, taken twice a day, in an amount of one-half pint. This will nourish you and build up your health so the blood will be of a richer quality. Hot milk on retiring is very easily assimilated and conducive to sleep, all of which will help to build up your health and add to your weight.

Alice. To increase the apparent size of your bust, according to the way I know her, answer the letters of rich and poor alike; her loves and powers were unbounded. No one could appeal to him and be unanswered.

THE HOUSEHOLD

Edited by Anna Kitterhouse.

ON YOUR TABLE.

Can you boast of the fact that your dining table always looks attractive? It is a common sight to see housewives in these days when women's whole sphere of ambition does not lie within the four walls of a house. There is a certain air of good breeding that comes from the possession of an attractive dinner table.

Three things do more than anything else to making a dinner table attractive—sparkling clean glass, perfectly polished silver, and snow-white table linen. And there are times when things are well within the reach of almost anyone. You can buy tumblers for 10 cents apiece that glisten to perfection if properly washed and dried. Any sort of napkin and fork is a good distinction if kept bright, and this can be effected by having them polished once a week and meantime washed carefully, sealed in boiling water and dried with care. Three things that are common now, and that the linen should really be linen, not the cotton substitutes to which some of us had to accustom ourselves during war days. And it means frequent washing. But just as little need be taken in this, as wash each week ought not to put too great a burden on your laundry, even if you yourself are that worthy individual.

It is worth while to set the table carefully and to insist that others who set the table for you follow the same careful rules of placing dishes and silver with precision. Try and see what satisfaction comes from just this, for a rather ordinary dinner table takes on real distinction when this is done, and even cheap china looks aristocratic.

DOWNTWARD TREND ON TOBACCO SEEN

Athens, Ga., December 16.—(Special)—That no prediction can be made as to the market price of bright tobacco next year was the statement of Professor E. C. Westbrook, tobacco specialist of the State College of Agriculture here today in regard to the outlook for the industry for the coming year. "Tobacco is the most popular commodity in that the crop is governed by supply and demand," he said, "and no definite assurance can be given in this record."

"The estimate place the 1923 tobacco crop of the United States at 1,436,000,000 pounds as compared with an average of 1,335,000,000 for the three previous years," Professor Westbrook said. "It is estimated also that more than 1,000,000,000 pounds of the annual hold-over is in the hands of dealers and manufacturers. It therefore appears that we have more than 200,000,000 pounds more for the coming year than had for the past three years, and the fact that tobacco consumption increases from year to year, it is not thought that the large increase in carry-over of the past year will be required to supply the demand."

INCREASE IN ACREAGE.

The present outlook points toward an increase in the tobacco acreage for 1924, which further favorable conditions will bring about a corresponding increase in production.

The total pounds of tobacco manufactured in the United States in 1922 was 667,400,000 pounds; 522,500,000 pounds in 1921; and 541,500,000 pounds in 1920. The amount of bright tobacco used in the manufacture of cigarettes in 1922 was 161,000,000 pounds; 31,000,000 pounds in 1919 and 13,000,000 pounds in 1908. The amount of plug smoking tobacco and snuff in 1922 was 310,400,000 pounds; 350,400,000 pounds in 1919, and 290,600,000 pounds in 1900. Tobacco used in the manufacture of cigars in 1922 was 141,100,000 pounds; 105,400,000 in 1919 and 104,000,000 in 1900.

It can be seen from the figures that there has been a large increase in the amount of tobacco used in the manufacture of cigarettes, but not a very great increase in the other manufactured tobacco. It is easy to understand why bright tobacco, the greater part of which is manufactured into cigarettes, has had such strong demand. The increase in the production of bright tobacco has just about kept pace with the increase in demand.

Exports Give.

"Leaf tobacco exported to other countries was as follows: In 1922, 351,000,000 pounds; 1921, 515,500,000 pounds; 1920, 467,600,000 pounds; 1919, 765,300,000 pounds. In 1922, 11,470,000,000 cigarettes were exported as compared with 16,200,000,000 in 1919. The export of other manufactured tobacco has fallen

SCHILLER IN ATLANTA ON TOUR OF THEATERS

E. A. Schiller, general representative of Loew's Theatrical enterprises with headquarters in New York, is in the city for a short stay looking over the Loew interests here. Mr. Schiller has been making a hurried swing over the circuit, having just recently opened the new Loew theater in Omaha.

Mr. Schiller is quite enthusiastic over the success of the full week policy in the southern houses, and promises a number of big time acts in the very near future. Mr. Schiller says, "The low value of money in many of the European countries has made it impossible for these countries to buy a regular amount of United States tobacco. These countries have been making a substantial amount of tobacco production for home consumption in many European countries. The countries in central Europe produced the largest tobacco crop this year they have grown 100,000,000 pounds, according to government statistics."

"In the face of the situation presented by these statistics, it would seem that the trend of prices of tobacco could be downward."

26 FARM SURVEYS MADE BY COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

Athens, Ga., December 16.—(Special)—A total of twenty-six farms surveys covering 3,187 farms in forty-four counties have been completed since the establishment of the department of agricultural economics in the State College of Agriculture, according to a report of this work made today.

The surveys, which have been made include a farm management survey of Brooks county to determine labor increases and cost of production, the results of which were published in this week, beginning tonight.

Surveys to determine labor income, to determine cost of producing hogs, to determine the cost of producing bright tobacco, the cost of growing hemp, the cost of growing and handling peaches, and numerous other crops have been studied.

The results have been published and are available for distribution from the State College of Agriculture.

COMPLETE ANALYSES OF SOILS IN EARLY

Athens, Ga., December 16.—(Special)—The chemical analyses of the soils of Early county, Georgia have been completed and the analysis report is now available for distribution. Analyses were made by Profs. Carter, Lowry, Collins and Soule of the soil chemistry department of the State College of Agriculture, and are complete in every detail as to the food content of the soils of this county.

The report also contains valuable information in regard to the increasing and maintenance of the soil fertility. Early county, crops recommended and other suggestions toward upholding the soils and producing better crops.

Copies of this report may be obtained by writing the State College of Agriculture, Athens.

DINNER TO BE GIVEN TO C. B. HEINEMANN

(At the Lyric)

Every Hopwood's greatest farce comedy success, funnier and faster than "Fair and Warmer," is to be presented at the Lyric theater all this week, beginning tonight.

Surveys to determine the cost of producing bright tobacco, the cost of growing hemp, the cost of growing and handling peaches, and numerous other crops have been studied.

The results have been published and are available for distribution from the State College of Agriculture.

SOUTH GEORGIA TRIPLETS LEARN HOW TO WALK

Triplets born to Hattie Harden, Waynesboro negro, about a year ago, have "learned to walk," and are enjoying excellent health, according to letter from the woman received here by Atlanta business man who came to Hattie's rescue in a financial way shortly after the triplets were born.

A plea for financial aid to "help these three babies" was made by Hattie last year to Governor Hardwick, but the governor had no funds allotted for the raising of triplets, he turned the appeal over to The Constitution, which published it. As a result, a generous-hearted Atlanta business man came to Hattie's aid and she was enabled to "raise the triplets properly."

A letter from the woman received by the local business man last week says:

"Dear Sir: I write you as to let you know how my triplets babies are getting along and also to let Mr. _____ no in this letter I am writing to you as I haven't got his no. You and Mr. _____ hope me so much with my babies and now I am a happy mother over three healthy walking triplet babies."

The report also contains valuable information in regard to the increasing and maintenance of the soil fertility. Early county, crops recommended and other suggestions toward upholding the soils and producing better crops.

Copies of this report may be obtained by writing the State College of Agriculture, Athens.

URGES MARKETING SOUTHERN FOODS

BY EDNA CAIN DANIEL

Quinton, Ga., December 16.—(Special)—It is entirely possible to develop both home and foreign markets for distinctively southern food products, according to Livingston Snow, head of the Snow's Food Co., of Quinton, "packers of fine foods." In an interview here today on the subject of what can be done to enable Georgia farmers to diversify and to find markets for the varied Georgia products, he said:

"Our company is specializing on pecans, peanut butter and similar products and my two seasons of experience convince me that Georgia has limitless possibilities in marketing her many fine products. Right now we have sixty people in our plant shelling and grading pecans. Our business in this line has increased five times over that of last season. We are shipping out all over the country. The bakeries and manufacturers are our wholesale dealers. We shipped a large order of shelled pecans to a Canadian city this week."

Pushed by Orders.

Every Georgia market is flooded with California products as we all know and the order that gave me the greatest satisfaction in life was a very nice one from a Los Angeles dealer. We have been rushed literally to the limit, dark till orders promptly. To encourage people who feel that Georgia is at a disadvantage, or that we cannot organize the marketing game, I want to say that one of the very largest baking concerns in the country bought their supply of pecans in Georgia this year when in the past they have used Texas seedlings. We have shipped 1,400 pounds of shelled pecans to this country over 2,000 pounds to another country manufacturing pecans which has habitually the Texas seedlings in the past. These people wrote us they were highly pleased with the products from Georgia. We have this season received the third order from an Atlanta customer.

Foreign Market

"But what I consider the most important market possibility is in foreign countries. We have a very positive inquiry this season from Scandinavia for pecans. We have had a large number of right now we have sixty people in our plant shelling and grading pecans. Our business in this line has increased five times over that of last season. We are shipping out all over the country. The bakeries and manufacturers are our wholesale dealers. We shipped a large order of shelled pecans to a Canadian city this week."

ALLEGED BANDIT JAILED AND LOOT GIVEN TO VICTIM

Charles Wyatt, negro, 66 Richmond street, Sunday night, it is charged, essayed the role of bandit long enough to relieve Salmon Simonds, another negro, of $33, and found him self hard and fast in the toils of the law.

Wyatt pressed a pistol against Simonds' breast and demanded "yo change." Simonds handed over $33, and Wyatt fled down Richmond street in the direction of Fraser street.

Simonds notified police headquarters and Call Officers Fred Bullard and Walter Good went to the scene, locating Wyatt on Fraser street from a description of him furnished by Simonds.

Wyatt attempted to pull his pistol but Officer Goode was too quick, threatening to shoot if the negro moved. Wyatt was disarmed, relieved of $25 and was returned to Simonds and taken to police station to answer charges of robbery and carrying concealed weapons.

Wyatt was held without further molestation and constant heckling by the police committee.

The chief of the police committee has been asked to set aside and substantiate the fact that he is a Christian gentleman of unsullied reputation and unimpeachable character with thirty-five years of faithful service to his credit, without a blemish upon his private life or a single proven charge against his official life in all these years.

"This record is an enviable one. No man in political life in Georgia has ever been held in such high esteem and regard. It is not a peer or a parallel. Editorially within the last year each of our great dailies has commended and spoken in highest terms of the character and reputation of Chief Beavers."

Thus far the newspapermen have been writing of the pleasure trips on which he has made.

He is a Christian gentleman of unsullied reputation and unimpeachable character. This tribute on your part gives the disapproval of every right-thinking citizen regardless of his partisan line-up.

"Gentlemen of the police committee, be clean sports and admit your defeat legally, morally and spiritually and let the dogs off and then go home."

The famous architect arrived late Sunday afternoon and is stopping at the Georgian Terrace hotel. He will remain here for several days, going over details of construction of the Baltimore.
